A 24-hour Prisoner of War and Mission in Action memorial flag run kicked off at 4:30 p.m. May 24 at the Hercules Theater on Ramstein to honor military POWs and MIAs.

The memorial run was planned by Senior Airman Kyle Gibson, 86th Operations Support Squadron air traffic control.

"When I was at Langley, we had a memorial run," he said. "I talked to a few people here about doing one on base because I thought it was an exceptional thing to take part in and wanted to give others the opportunity."

Nearly 30 different organizations from around the KMC took part in the memorial run.

The Vogelweh and Ramstein commissaries donated water, sports drinks, power bars and fruit to participants.

"I came out because there isn't a better thing to support than this," said Airman 1st Class Jeremii Van Komen, 86th OSS air traffic control.

Runners made a 1.8-mile loop around a section of the base, handing off the flag at the Hercules Theater as the runners came around.

"We decided to use the route we did for maximum visibility," said Tech. Sgt. Jason Almanza, 86th OSS air traffic control. "Especially considering some of the running will be done in the dark."

Before the 24-hour run began, Gibson gave everyone something to think about.

"Over the next 24 hours this flag will not stop," he said. "They didn't stop for us so we're not going to stop in remembrance of those who gave everything defending our freedom."

The 86th OSS ran the first leg, which kicked off the event.

"There is no greater thing we can do to honor the fallen, the missing and those who paid the ultimate price," said Airman 1st Class Frederick Leary, 86th OSS air traffic control.

Participants from the Navy pass the Prisoner of War and Missing in Action flag to an Airman during the 24-hour memorial flag run May 24 at the Hercules Theater on Ramstein. The memorial run, which was held in honor of military POWs and MIAs, had about 350 participants. The memorial flag traveled a total of 151.2 miles.

Brig. Gen. Theodore Harrison, the commanding general of the Expeditionary Contracting Command, presided over the ceremony.

After the passing of the colors, Harrison publicly praised Daniels' leadership and accomplishments.

"Under Deb's leadership, the 409th CSB has matured into a world-class organization," he said. "She developed a newly organized military workforce while simultaneously, physically relocating the brigade headquarters and other key essential contracting offices across Germany, and she did this all while the brigade executed one-third of the ECC's

Finding your way down a winding Air Force road

by Tech. Sgt. Chad Thompson
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

There are many things in life we can't change: the ones who we grow close to, the ones who bring meaning to what we do, the people who change us — our true friends.

Many times during the course of my 14-year Air Force career I have felt I was in the wrong place at the wrong time, but I think I was mistaken. I think, in fact, I was in the exact place I needed to be, whether I was there for someone or someone else was there for me.

We are each given very small clues day in and day out of what we are meant to do. I am still not quite sure where I will be in 10 years or 20 years or even in about three years. I know where I would hope to be, but will that truly be where I will end up? Probably not.

My piece of advice is to make every moment count, no matter where you are or where you think you should be. If there is something in life that reaches out and touches your soul, stop and take a breath and enjoy it because you never know when you might get the chance to experience it again.

It's funny how the simplest things in life can bring more meaning than anything, and it's even funnier how these silly things come about sometimes.

You wait and wonder and try and come up with some sort of solution for things and then one day it just hits you like a ton of bricks — or, maybe it just takes a moment of weakness to see it and realize it.

Nevertheless, always look to the stars and never stop hoping and dreaming.

Enjoy Europe while you're here. Get out and explore. Soak in the culture, learn a bit of the language and get out of your comfort zone once in a while — you never know what or who you might find.

World War II aircraft artifact returns to 309th AS

Contributed by U.S. Army Garrison Benelux

The 309th Airlift Squadron received a World War II artifact through the combined efforts of an author, a group of Airmen and a war memorial group during a private ceremony conducted May 22 at Chievres Air Base.

The artifact was a hydraulic accumulator from a P-47 Thunderbolt, which was crash-landed by 1st Lt. John R. Read on Sept. 13, 1944, near Wanne, Belgium. He eventually returned to his unit and kept flying. However, Read's broken aircraft stayed at the crash site, near Malmedy, for years.

The Wings of Memory, a Belgian war memorial organization, organized the transfer from the Tennessee Museum of Aviation to the 309th AS after a request from author and former astronaut Thomas Jones. Jones was working with Wings of Memory trying to discover information about crash sites involving the 365th Fighter Group — Read's flying unit.

"The possibility a museum would give that artifact away — even for another museum — is nearly zero," said Dirk De Quick of Wings of Memory.

After the discovery, a call was placed to the U.S. national military representative in Belgium, Air Force Col. Mark Horn, Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe. Horn agreed to a symbolic hand off of the artifact at a small ceremony and asked the 309th to make all the arrangements.

"You should be commended. I have tremendous amount of respect for each of you for dedicating even a portion of your lives to the men and women who gave their lives fighting against tyranny and for freedom. It's an honor to receive this artifact on behalf of a grateful nation," said Lt. Col. Tracy Patterson, 309th AS commander.

"It's a small piece that may seem insignificant to some, but for the people who launched and flew these aircraft over the skies of Europe, this has a huge impact," said Capt. Robert Weiterhausen. "U.S. and Belgian cooperation has been a hallmark of our 45 years in the Benelux, and this is just one more example of the commitment our countries have to each other."

New process for vehicle registration, inspection

by 2nd Lt. Kay M. Nissen

86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

A new vehicle inspection process has been implemented in order to streamline services and cut down waiting time for KMC members seeking to register or re-register their vehicles on Kapaun Air Station.

The updates to the process are a part of the "Air Force Smart Operations for the 21st century" initiative, as well as ensuring readiness for the peak permanent change of station season coming up this summer.

"The reason we're trying to do this is so that we can get our customers back to the work center," said Master Sgt. Norman Dominguez, 569th U.S. Forces Police Squadron.

"(During peak PCS season), the average wait time for inspection, re-registration and renewal is 2.25 hours," he said. "Our whole goal was to try to decrease the wait time by 65 percent."

The changes include having a screening process prior to entering the inspection queue, to ensure all required documents are in hand before being seen.

"There is a screening booth for customers. If the customer has all those items (needed), they go through the line and wait to be seen," Dominguez said. "If they don't have the required items, there is an exit lane."

Once a KMC member enters the inspection line, the vehicle readiness squadron and security forces substation have now teamed up in one location to increase efficiency.

"While their vehicle is being inspected, they are talking to the VRS person, and they also determine if they want a one year or two year for their renewal," Dominguez said. "Once that's determined, they speak to a security forces person to make any updates to address or phone numbers.

"During that time, the inspector is looking over the vehicle," he continued. "Once the item is paid for and they pass inspection, the inspector will place the decal on the license plate. The customer does not have to take off his or her plates."

While the new process has been implemented, a noticeable decrease in wait time has occurred.

"(With no cars) in the past two weeks, it takes 11 minutes total — from screening booth until you walk out to your vehicle," Dominguez said. "If there are a few vehicles in line it takes 15 to 20 minutes. Come peak season, we will see how this changes."

Harrison also welcomed Bailey.

"Bill is highly respected and understands, promotes and values teamwork," Harrison said. "He brings with him great insight, energy and enthusiasm."

Bailey expressed appreciation to Daniels and also addressed the Soldiers and staff of the 409th CSB on his plans as the new commander.

Some of Bailey's contracting assignments include executive officer to the principal military deputy to the assistant secretary of the Army (acquisition, logistics and technology), senior service college fellow at the University of Texas at Austin and the commander of the 902nd Contingency Contracting Battalion.

Daniels is scheduled to deploy to Afghanistan for her next assignment where she will assist NATO forces with contracting.

21st TSC holds Best Warrior competition

Staff Sgt. Michael Taylor
21st TSC Public Affairs

GRAFENWÖHR, Germany — An intelligence analyst, medical noncommissioned officer and engineer platoon leader earned the distinction as the 21st Theater Sustainment Command's top warriors during a grueling four-day Best Warrior competition held here May 17 to 21.

Soldiers pushed to the maximum of their physical and mental stress levels to become the command's Best Warrior, Best Warrior Leader and Best Warrior Officer.

"My favorite part of the competition was combatives, because that's where I got this nice little scar on my face, and I was able to experience a real-life fighting scenario," said the 2012 Best Warrior, Pfc. Richard B. Shepard, an intelligence analyst with the 21st Special Troops Battalion and a native of San Diego.

"The military operations on urban terrain site simulated real-life events that Soldiers don't get to experience too often, and it helped to prepare us and train us and to take something away from it that we wouldn't normally get from regular training," Shepard said.

Staff Sgt. Devin W. Allred, a medical NCOIC with the 15th Engineer Battalion, was named the contest's Best Warrior Leader.

"It's a big relief. It was a really rigorous and stiff competition. There were a lot of great noncommissioned officers to compete against and learn from," said Allred, who is a native of Richfield, Utah. "I am just happy that I was able to be fortunate enough to come out on top and learn a lot."

Competitors and their sponsors pick up the pace in the early stages of the 12-mile ruck march during the 21st Theater Sustainment Command's Best Warrior competition May 21 in the Grafenwöhr Training Area in Grafenwöhr, Germany. The ruck march was the competition's final event.

"Without a doubt, the urban environment situation training exercise lane was my favorite part of the competition," said 1st Lt. Thomas P. Malejko, the 2012 Best Warrior Officer, a platoon leader with the 541st Engineer Company and a native of Allamuchy, N.J.

During the competition, Soldiers were constantly engaged with a variety of tasks, survived with minimum sleep and faced surprises around every corner.

The surprises started early in the competition with the Soldiers being administered a written exam during what they thought was just a meet-and-greet session at 7 p.m. the night prior to the actual start of the events.

The next morning started early for the competitors with a physical fitness test around 5 a.m. Immediately following the PT test, the Soldiers moved to a lengthy obstacle course. The goal was to correctly navigate through the 18 obstacles as fast as they could.

Following that challenge, the competitors were faced with an M9, M16 stress shoot/reflective fire range, which in turn was followed by a day land navigation course, occupied bivouac site and night land navigations course. Throughout all the challenges, the Soldiers were still responsible for performing security details, maintenance and improving fighting positions. And that was just day one for the competitors.

The Soldiers soon learned that the following days would not be any easier. On day two, they faced three hands-on STX lanes along with a react-to-contact scenario, which took place that evening.

On day three, the Soldiers faced a MOUT site, which was infused with an Army combatives station that tested the Soldiers combatives abilities to the fullest by forcing them to face three opponents at the same time. They also appeared before a field board, fired the M2 weapons system, performed physical readiness training, and a mystery event.

During the mystery event the Soldiers were captured and had to escape from their captors and navigate their way back to safety.

On the fourth and final day, the competitors conducted a 12-mile foot march to complete the competition. Later that afternoon, a barbecue was held to honor all the competitors, and during a presentations ceremony the winners were announced.

All the winners will go on to compete in the U.S. Army Europe competition in hope of ultimately making it to the Department of the Army level competition.

At midnight, two Airmen with the U.S. Air Forces in Europe Air Ground Operation School took the flag in full combat gear. The gear consisted of body armor, several different types of radios, a global positioning system, satellite communications, compasses, water and more. The equipment totaled about 70 pounds.

"That's how the POWs and MIAs did it," said Tech. Sgt. Jonathan Dvareckas, USAFE AGOS joint terminal attack controller. "They weren't in PT gear while fighting."

Members from the Navy participated in the event as well.

"I saw it as a good opportunity to give back to the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen who selflessly sacrificed everything," said Navy

Petty Officer 2nd Class David Strode, hospital corpsman. "We need to remember what they did for us."

Two Airmen made a goal to run for the full 24 hours.

"I am training for the Belgian Death March and this is a good way to see where I'm at," said Airman 1st Class Brittany Davis, 786th Force Support Squadron services. "What better way to test my ability and give my support to POWs and MIAs."

They ran the majority of the 24 hours, stopping only to refill water, use the restroom and change clothes.

At 4:30 p.m. Friday, the two led the last group of runners and took the flag to the retreat ceremony.

"Being at retreat with the flag was moving," Gibson said. "Planning this event and carrying it through has been rough, however it was completely and 100 percent worth it."

At the end of the 24 hours, about 350 participants and the memorial flag traveled a total of 151.2 miles.

Team KMC: Firefighters take part in Combat Challenge

by Airman 1st Class Hailey Haux
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Her eyes were closed as she imagined the upcoming challenge, attempting to take deep breaths in the mask that could potentially save her life.

Going through each and every step of the course, she visualized what needed to be done in her head and took another set of deep breaths.

When she came to the end of the course in her head, she opened her eyes, took a breath and waited. A siren sounded and the Firefighter Combat Challenge had begun for Airman 1st Class Jessica Clasen, 886th Civil Engineer Squadron firefighter.

"I try to visualize the course ahead and focus on what needs to be done," Clasen said.

The 886th CES firefighters have put together a team of six Airmen, five male and one female, to compete against firefighters from around the world in the Firefighter Combat Challenge, said Staff Sgt. Jeremy Noah, 886th CES crew chief and head team member.

What exactly is a Firefighter

Combat Challenge?

The Sports Medicine Center of the University of Maryland created a five-event challenge in 1975 to test and gauge the physical demands of a firefighter.

May 1991 was the first challenge, which started as a test and evolved into a sport for firefighters all around the world to participate in.

To win the challenge, participants must complete several events with the fastest time.

The first event is a five-story stairwell sprint. Participants must climb a tower carrying a bag with a hose. Once firefighters get to the top of the tower they must place the bag in a specific location.

Once at the top of the tower the contestant starts the second event — a hose hoist. They must hoist a donut roll of hose to the top and place it in a specified area. Once that is done, participants climb down the tower, ensuring every step is touched.

Forcible entry is the third event. The Keiser Force Machine is utilized to simulate a forcible entry by hitting a mallet against a sled, driving it along a 160-pound steel beam.

Next up, competitors drag a fire hose filled with water 75 feet and shoot the water at a target.

The last event is the victim rescue. Participants must drag a 175-pound mannequin backward 106 feet. The time then stops when the competitor and the mannequin completely cross the finish line.

Individual world record times are 1:19.02 for males and 1:48.41 for females.

In preparation for the events, Team KMC/Ramstein trains rigorously, Noah said.

"We train about four to six days a week," he said. "We do weight lifting, cross-fit training, anaerobic exercise and competition specific training where we run through the course. Over the eight years I have been doing this challenge, this year we are training better, resting better and learning a lot from previous years."

Keeping motivated during training helps, Noah said.

"I've played sports all my life," Clasen said. "However, this is harder as far as training goes. I just take things one step at a time and work on perfecting my technique."

Combat Challenges are held all around the world.

"We just had a competition in France," Noah said. "We had one team member place second overall out of 93 participants. Airman Clasen placed second out of five in the female division, and our relay team placed first out of 19 teams. Our next competition is a two-day event in Poland."

Being in competitions around the world gives the team a chance to travel.

"I remind everyone that we need to display professionalism wherever we go," Noah said. "Most places we go, it's the first time some people have seen Americans, so we need to represent, not only the Air Force but the United States."

As this team of firefighters prepares for the next challenge, they set personal goals as well.

"I am hoping to get below three minutes on my next challenge," Clasen said. "I am working on my techniques, training better and eating better. If I get a personal best, that's a huge accomplishment in my mind."

At the end of the day Clasen took off her mask, closed her eyes, took a deep breath of fresh air and reflected on the challenge she has just completed, already thinking and anticipating the next challenge she will face.

NATO mission calls for USAF teamwork

by 2nd Lt. Lyndsey Horn
48th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

KEFLAVIK, Iceland — The alert phone rings at Keflavik International Airport, Iceland.

A U.S. Air Force F-15C Eagle pilot, who is on alert 24 hours a day, answers the call. The control and reporting center tells him to report to the operations desk immediately.

At the desk, not only do other F-15C pilots greet him, but so do aircrews from a KC-135 Stratotanker and a C-130J Super Hercules. They receive the operations brief and are put on a three hour stand-by.

The Airmen know when the radio calls "scramble, scramble, scramble," they must run to their planes as quickly as possible. The F-15C will be airborne within 15 minutes, while the KC-135, the C-130J and its pararescuemen will be up in 30 minutes.

These aircrews make up the four major weapon systems of the 493rd Expeditionary Fighter Squadron and their mission is to conduct NATO air policing for the country of Iceland from May 12 to Thursday.

Each of the systems are from a different U.S. Air Force base; the F-15Cs from the 48th Fighter Wing at Royal Air Force Lakenheath, England; the KC-135 from the 100th Air Refueling Wing at Royal Air Force

Courtesy photo

During a NATO air policing exercise, a C-130J Super Hercules, deployed from Ramstein, is intercepted by an F-15C Eagle, deployed from Royal Air Force Lakenheath, England. The aircraft are major weapon systems of the 493rd Expeditionary Fighter Squadron, which is made up of both U.S. Air Force and NATO personnel fulfilling an air policing mission that assists in assuring Iceland's air sovereignty from May 12 to Thursday.

Mildenhall, England; the C-130J from the 86th Airlift Wing at Ramstein; and the pararescuemen from the 58th Rescue Squadron at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev.

Once the alert sounds the components have their own separate duties in order to support the air policing. The F-15C intercepts unauthorized aircraft flying through Iceland's sovereign air space; the KC-135 provides tanker support should bad weather show up and the fighter jets cannot land; the C-130J works closely with the Icelandic Coast Guard to deliver combat search and rescue for downed aircrew.

The groups, however, are closely integrated.

"When we first got here, I gave them our capabilities brief," said Capt. Chris Leonhardt, 58th RQS combat rescue officer. "We are integrated with the (Control Reporting Center) and I have to coordinate with the actual EFS commander to get execution authority. We are all intertwined."

This integration allows them to work together in ways they have not often done before.

"It is cool to see them (the other aircrews) face-to-face," said 1st Lt. Dave Kuhn, 493rd EFS weapons. "We do mission planning with them and conduct exercises."

During one exercise in particular, the C-130J became the unfriendly aircraft flying above the Icelandic snow topped mountains and the F-15Cs practiced intercepting it.

"The C-130 is a lot larger and slower (than an F-15C)," said Kuhn, making the interception a unique experience. "It is neat to work with something other than an F-15."

Even though the operating systems for the four components are different, at the end of the day, they work together for one NATO mission.

"It is good for all different groups to understand how we work and operate together," said Capt. Charrissa DeLion, 493rd EFS KC-135 pilot. "When we work like this together we realize we have more similarities than differences."

Youth workers celebrated for hard work

Recognized for their dedication, long hours and hard work, youth workers and teachers were recently celebrated during a nationwide salute.

In early May, U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern celebrated National Teacher Appreciation Week, dedicated to men and women who educate children, said Janice Broccoli, a Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation partner specialist in Landstuhl.

In the past, each of the Child, Youth and School Services' facilities created their own events to thank the teachers. This year, each facility honored the teachers in a uniform way, Broccoli said.

The events were designed to celebrate the hard work the teachers do at CYSS, said Ellen Harris, CYSS Services coordinator.

"Our teachers are very talented, undergo strict training and truly love working with kids," Harris said.

Each facility created journals for each teacher that parents could write notes in to thank their children's teacher.

"Parents are recognizing teachers by writing notes thanking them for what they have done and what they mean to the children and parents," Harris said. "One parent even asked for extra sheets to write notes for teachers that have already moved away because they made such a difference in their life."

In addition to the journals, staff members were given certificates to leave work 59 minutes early and another signed by the garrison commander thanking them for their service to child care. Each facility also hosted a luncheon for their staff on Friday, Broccoli said.

With more than 400 children in regular, full-time child care and several thousand more in part-time, hourly or sports programs spread from Miesau to Sembach Kaserne, the CYSS staff spends a lot of hours with the KMC children, Harris said.

"The time, effort and care our staff put into their jobs is awe-inspiring," Harris said. "They do make a difference in their lives."

Garrison shines light on standout teachers

Each of the U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern Child, Youth and School Services facilities were asked to nominate one teacher who stood out. Here are those results and a few comments about them:

» Maria Rodriguez, Kleber Child Development Center:

Maria has outstanding teaching abilities, which is evident because the children are excited to see her everyday; they always greet her with a smile. She loves the children and is always going the extra mile to plan interactive and interesting lesson plans to keep them interested and eager to see what she has planned next.

She is a great teacher and very creative. She can use anything and teach the children how to turn it into a master piece.

» Marcia Bisco, Landstuhl Child Development Center 1:

Marcia has gone above and beyond in her program by doing special gardening projects, presenting a "Writing Without Tears" workshop/training and designing and replacing all of the center's intercom number signs.

» Laura Welsh-Strack, Landstuhl Child Development Center 2:

Although Laura has a Master of Business Administration, she went to a job fair and decided to give child care a try. Since then, she has taken every chance available to learn and grow in this field. She has completed her foundation level training in less than a year. She often asks for extra resources for parents and herself for things going on in the room. She is a real team player and always offers to help or stay late when needed.

» Karen Vernon, Landstuhl Youth Center:

Karen is a positive individual who has a strong work ethic and is extremely competent. Karen has developed strong relationships with both parents and youth. Because of this, she has helped bring more youth into the program. Karen has also helped secure several Boys & Girls Clubs of America grants for the program. These grants include a Triple Play grant in the amount of $2,500 and a technology grant in the amount of $5,000.

» Shernett Bailey, Miesau Child Development Center:

Shernett has been working for Miesau Child Development Center since October 1998. Shernett started out as a FLEX CYPA floater, in 2000 moved up to a full time CYPA assigned to the toddler classroom, promoted to lead teacher in 2001 and finally became the supervisory program specialist in 2010. In her time at Miesau, she has worked for four CYSS coordinators, 10 directors, seven assistant directors and five training and curriculum specialists. Shernett is someone who is truly vested in the KMC and dedicated to CYSS and the Miesau CDC family.

» Kurt Nussag, Youth Sports:

Kurt Nussag has been with CYSS for the past four years. His knowledge in sports and fitness is truly a valuable asset to the KMC.

He has worked many hours as a volunteer for CYSS and was recently recognized with the presidential volunteer service award.

10th AAMDC competes in Best Warrior Competition

by 2nd Lt. Jean P. Tomte

10th AAMDC Public Affairs

Twenty Soldiers from the 10th Army Air and Missile Defense Command, located on Rhine Ordnance Barracks, competed in the 2012 Best Warrior Competition May 14 to 18 to determine the most qualified candidate to represent the 10th AAMDC at the U.S. Army Europe competition in August.

Soldiers eligible to compete were junior officers in the ranks of second lieutenant to captain who had not completed the Captain's Career Course, noncommissioned officers in the ranks of corporal through sergeant first class and Soldiers in the ranks of private through specialist. The winners of the competition were:

- OFFICER: Lt. Joshua Herrington, Alpha Battery, 5/7 ADA
- NCO: Sgt. 1st Class Jesus Arellano, Charlie Battery, 5/7 ADA
- JUNIOR ENLISTED: Spc. James Earl, Hhb, 5/7 ADA

The 10th AAMDC chief of staff, Lt. Col. Benjamin Ogden, briefed the competitors on the first day of the competition.

"I see this as a best professional warrior competition. By simply competing, you've already come out as the highest professional in this organization," he said. "You have to maintain your technical proficiency as Soldiers and this event will test that."

Warriors who stepped up to compete had to master a series of events. During the competition, these warriors tested their ability to complete the Army physical fitness test, a 20K foot march, the stress shoot, the obstacle course, day and night land navigation, the M16 qualification range, the mystery event, the physical readiness training session, writing an essay, all Army warrior tasks and battle drills that are applicable to today's warfare environment.

Additionally, warriors appeared in front of a board to evaluate their knowledge in general in military bearing, resume, reporting procedures, uniform and appearance, and oral expression.

Spc. Justin McCarty from the 5-7 ADA rushes through the last phase of the obstacle course.

Spc. Jairo Garcia from the 5-7 ADA takes part in day land navigation.

"The training is going great, we all trained up before we got here. Now it is time to put what we learned at the battery level into practice," said Staff Sgt. Cedric Whitlock from Rock Hill, S.C. Whitlock is a launcher platoon squad leader from Delta Battery, 5-7 ADA.

When asked what his level of confidence was before starting the night land navigation, Whitlock said, "I never felt so confident. It depends how far apart my points are. I believe I can find all my three points in one hour."

The grading process was tough and fair, and the maximum points that could be achieved was 370.

"Soldiers are getting fatigued, and that's what this competition is all about. It gets you thinking critically and reacting to obstacles," said Sgt. 1st Class Derek Salley from Philadelphia, Pa., who was one of the evaluators.

"My job during this exercise was to distract the competitors and see if they will notice the brief case on the side of the car," said Spc. Robert Duverger, who works as a Patriot Operator Maintainer.

10th AAMDC Officer, NCO and Soldier Best Warrior Competition winners will receive several awards and recognition. Winners will also represent the command at the USAREUR competition.

Germans observe religious fest Thursday

by Petra Lessoing

86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Roman-Catholics in Germany will observe "Fronleichnam," or Corpus Christi Day, Thursday.

Corpus Christi Day is a religious fest observed 10 days after Pentecost. In some, but not all, German states, Fronleichnam is an official holiday. Stores, banks and official institutions will be closed in Rheinland-Pfalz, Saarland, Baden-Württemberg, Hessen, Bayern, in some communities in Saxony and Thüringen, and in areas with a heavy Catholic population.

The word Fronleichnam derives from old German and corresponds to the Latin word "Corpus Domini," Body of the Lord. In 1264, Pope Urban IV ordered the entire Catholic Church to observe the feast of Corpus Christi. The fest commemorates Christ's Last Supper the day before he died. It honors the real presence of Christ in the Eucharist.

Nowadays, the church holiday is a colorful event that includes solemn processions through the streets, which are decorated with flowers, little birch trees and church banners. Four altars are set up on the procession route to symbolize the four stops of Christ's way to the cross, known as the "Stations of the Cross."

A priest leads the procession and carries the Holy of Holies under a baldachin. Then, the ministrants, communion children of that year and worshippers follow. At the altars, the procession stops and participants say a prayer.

The procession is accompanied by singing and usually ends at a church or a public place where an open-air worship service is conducted.

Smallest town in Pfalz holds medieval market

by Petra Lessing

86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Obermoschel in the Donnersberg area will hold its 13th medieval market Saturday and Sunday at its nearby castle Moschellandsburg.

The event will feature vendors, craftsmen, knights, noblewomen, Vikings, musicians, jugglers and fire-eaters.

The market will open at 11 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday to be followed by musical performances.

More than 150 participants representing Vikings and Franconians of the 8th century and crusaders of the 11th century will demonstrate the various eras of the Middle Ages in a camp at the base of the castle. Visitors can learn about everyday items, including clothes, flatware and weapons.

In the castle yard, craftsmen such as blacksmiths, basket makers, turners and shoe makers will demonstrate medieval craftsmanship. Vendors will also sell their merchandise. Visitors can try out archery, visit a fortune teller or take a bath in a medieval tub.

Food specialties range from flammkuchen to roasted meat, fish, cheese and homemade cakes. Those wanting to taste a medieval drink can get a glass of mead.

A highlight on Saturday will be a torch parade by the knights and the music group Spectaculatus to be followed by a fire show in front of the illuminated castle.

On both days, knights will present show fights, at 4 p.m. Saturday and 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Jugglers and musicians will entertain the audience throughout the camp and castle areas.

Admission fee is €6 for adults and €3 for children and visitors in medieval clothes. Children shorter than a sword (1.40 meters) are admitted for free.

Parking lots are available at the base of the castle.

The center of Kaiserslautern will turn into a giant playground Saturday when the city and the advertising association "Kaiser in Lautern" sponsor its annual children's fest. Stores, local clubs and institutions will present manifold activities and special offers.

Children can learn from a balloon artist how to make figures from balloons and test their skills in can throwing, running with eggs and rope skipping. They can try out badminton, climbing on a climbing volcano, table tennis and a lot of other sports activities. In a creative workshop children can learn how to make soap and crafts with paper. They can paint the street with chalk, build boats, carve window decorations out of soap stones and do pottery.

A local ballet studio will invite the little ones to dance with them at 3 p.m. at Altenhof.

The free kiddy train will take children on a tour from noon to 4 p.m. starting on Schillerplatz.

The radio station RPR1 in Fackelstrasse will show children how to cook healthy food.

"This year we offer manifold activities for each taste," said Alexander Hess, manager of Kaiser in Lautern. "Children can have fun and parents can check out the special offers by stores and restaurants."

Information flyers listing the full program will be available in the stores that are members of Kaiser in Lautern and in public places. For details, visit www.werbegemeinschaft-kl.de.

Player Spotlight: Jacob Mattison

SPORT: Soccer

POSITION: Center midfielder (team captain)

TEAM: Ramstein Royals

AGE: 18

YEARS PLAYING: 14

Jacob Mattison recently signed a letter of intent to start the inaugural season of the University of West Alabama men's soccer team.

He has played at a competitive level in both Korea and Germany, including making the Surf Cup Team, a select team of 15 American youths living in Europe who competed against club teams in the U.S.

After his last game at the Department of Defense Dependents Schools championship soccer tournament playing with Ramstein, Mattison took time to discuss his love of the sport and his future plans.

What is your favorite part about soccer?

I've just been playing for so long that now it is a part of me.

What's the biggest challenge about playing center mid?

Soccer can be explained as playing one or two dimensional. Center midfielder is two dimensional because you're constantly under pressure from every angle – that's the toughest part.

Who is your inspiration?

Ryan Giggs. He plays for Manchester United. I just like him because he is a solid midfielder and it's inspiring that he has played at the highest level for 14 years.

What is the best advice you've been given?

If you want it, give everything you have. It's all about heart – you can coach skill, but you can't coach heart.

What are your future plans for school? Any interest in the MLS?

I'm excited to keep playing soccer and excited for the (college sport) atmosphere. With soccer, I'll take it one step at a time. When I go to college, my main focus is school.

Panthers beat Royals, winning third straight championship

by Airman 1st Class Trevor Rhynes
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The Patch Panthers of Stuttgart beat the Ramstein Royals 7-2 in the championship game of the Department of Defense Dependents School's tournament May 26 on Ramstein.

This marks the third championship in a row for the Panthers, each time facing off against the Royals. The Panthers previously beat the Royals 10-9 in 2010 and 8-7 in 2011 before winning this year's championship.

"Both teams worked extremely hard to get here, these are two great programs," said Gary Kellogg, a Panthers coach. "There was great sportsmanship from both teams, both having a good bunch of kids."

Practice makes perfect and when the Panthers weren't playing games, they were working on fundamentals.

"We spent a lot of time this year practicing for this tournament," said Dylan Measells, the winning pitcher. "We practiced twice a day, even on weekends."

Measells held the Royals to three hits, no earned runs, two unearned and struck out five batters over the five-inning game.

meaning this year, than any other.

"My son is a senior, who just won his third straight championship game, how do you think I feel?" Kellogg said. "There are tears in my eyes and I couldn't be more proud."

For Measells, this win was a fitting end to his final year of high school baseball.

"It feels great, having won my third straight championship," said Measells. "I look forward to playing in college."

The panthers finished the year 17-0 and the Royals completed the season 18-1.

Open Air of the year 2012

June 9 at Nanstein castle in Landstuhl "Carmen meets Gershwin" with Joe Wulf and his Orchestra, the dancers Suzann Bustani & José Arco Pérez & string ensemble

This year's "Open Air of the year" at Nanstein castle will be again a very special event. The castle will be turned into a wonderful, almost magical ambience.

"Carmen meets Gershwin" is the title of this year's event. A title that holds passion and emotions for ears and eyes. The program offers a mixture of the highlights of Georges Bizet's opera "Carmen" and the most popular pieces of George Gershwin. This music will be a great experience for the audience.

Carmen – Georges Bizet

Who doesn't know the popular melodies from the opera "Carmen", a passionate and emotional love drama about the young woman Carmen? Today it's known as one of the most popular works of opera literature.

George Gershwin

George Gershwin was one of the most successful composers, pianists and conductors. He composed pieces for Broadway as well as classical concerts. His "Rhapsody in Blue", a symphonic Jazz-composition, is considered to be the link between symphonic music and jazz music. And even if Gershwin set a high value in stating, that he, with "Porgy and Bess", had composed an opera, is this piece with its folksy elements of Spirituals, Blues and Jazz, stylistically seen on the edge to Musical. Many melodies from "Porgy and Bess" have become Standards. "Summertime" is undoubtedly one of the most recorded songs of all times, interpreted by a countless number of musicians.
